

Back Pain

One of the more common problems requiring treatment by health care professionals is back pain. Exercise is an important component of treatment, but its effectiveness is dependant on numerous factors. It is essential to first obtain a clear diagnosis which identifies which structures are contributing to the pain, and then have the appropriate exercises prescribed. Physiotherapists are trained to provide an accurate diagnosis, and develop and monitor an appropriate exercise program specific to your back condition.